Objectives:

- Familiarising all aspects of the field of Journalism. So that students become more proficient in both theory and practical skills of the media in general.

- Preparing the students' ready-to-be recruited by Media, Advertising & Corporate houses. The content of the programme is designed to be dynamic and incorporated changes to meet requirements of the industry.
- To facilitate a deep understanding of the role and influence of the media in an individual's life.
- To hone the communication skills.
- To help identify media's communicative potential
- To think retrospectively of media use and its effects through live and vibrant examples from everyday experience.

Learning Outcome:

- The programme aims to churn out responsible media professionals who would contribute positively to the society.
- The programme aims to facilitate better career opportunities for all those students of this course and get them ready to tackle challenges in the professional setup.
- The programme aims to strike a balance between the dynamic working environment and professional ethics in the field of Journalism.

Changing Media Scenario: The curriculum has been designed keeping with the industry requirements and includes subjects such as Multimedia, Photojournalism, Short Film Making, Creating Blogs and Vlogs, Mobile Journalism, Writing for Media, Producing News Bulletins for print, electronic and digital media. The rapid growth in media industry demands highly skilled human resource.

Skill Enhancement: The new curriculum focuses more on hands on training, enhancing the skills of the students. It not only aims at producing responsible communication professionals but also citizens with a humane approach in day-to-day life.

Pedagogy:

The goal of Journalism pedagogy is offered with an objective to train and prepare professionally skilled media persons and communication experts. It lends exposure to a wider range of meticulously framed syllabi.

Importance to Theory and Practical and its application: The Journalism curriculum focuses on innovative components in theory and practice, which in turn equips students to be full-fledged media persons. It is suggested that students be divided in to batches of not more than 10 each under a teacher to enable effectiveness in teaching practicals.

Utilisation of ICT: The global media industry is in anticipation of ICT trained communication experts. To enhance critical and creative thinking among students, ICT tools are incorporated into the teaching methods which include research-led teaching, via presentation through smart classrooms, and practical productions.

Research-based and research-led teaching: The Research Projects are introduced in the curriculum to strengthen the research concepts among the budding researchers. The students are introduced to various facets of Journalism research such as print, electronic and new media research, global, health and political communication research, folk media, intercultural communication and research on development issues and so on in accordance to the relevance of the profession. The students will be required to do research project on a topic of their choice under the supervision of a research guide.

Brain Storming Approach: Students will be involved in groups and individual discussions. This will help the students to develop and involve in the process of critical thinking and analysing. It further helps them in decision making and crisis management and also boosts self-confidence.
